

You can't tell us that following the "multiple conflicting regulations" isn't a bogus complaint about something that is easily handled by computers. We want more shielding, not less, from strangers calling intrusively with solitations. There are plenty of other ways for CBA members to get their message to us. Perhaps the CBA also wants to require that we keep our doors open? Perhaps they will pay for a second line and a screening device to recieve their calls?